 Bodin, who is termed by Bayle one of the ablest men that appeared in France during the 16th century, is thus characterized by the first philosopher of the present day.—
 "Bodin appears to have been one of the first that united a philosophical turn of thinking with an extensive knowledge of jurisprudence and of history. His learning is often ill digested, and his conclusions still oftener rash and unsound; yet, it is but justice to him to acknowledge that in his views of the philosophy of law he has approached very nearly to some leading ideas of Lord Bacon: while in his refined combinations of historical facts he has more than once struck into a train of speculation bearing a strong resemblance to that afterwards pursued by Montesquieu."

- 294 Bartas (William, Lord) The Third Dayes Creation; by that most excellent, learned, and divine poet. Done verse for verse out of the originall French by Thomas Winter, Maister of Arts, London, printed for Thomas Clerke, 1604, 4to. sewed

This Translator published in the preceding year The Second Daye of the First Week of Du Bartas, which is noticed by Antony Wood; but neither he, nor Mr. Bliss, had seen this piece. (See Ath. Oxon. 1. 744. 4to.) It is dedicated to Prince Henry, of whose gracious acceptance of it he rather assures himself, "remembering your gracefull embracing of my former Essay of this verie nature, coming but accidentally into your hands." Commendatory verses are prefixed in French and Latin by John Sanford, John Dunster, Thomas Mason, Nathanael Tomkins, and Henry Ashwood; and, at the end, an English Sonnet by Thomas Mason, Suffolciensis. Four Sonnets are added by the Author to Sir Thomas Chaloner, Sir George Somers, Sir Thomas Lucy, and Dr. James.

The two preceding works are written in defence of the refusal of the secular, or seminary, priests in England, to receive George Blackwell in the capacity of arch-priest. Neither of them is mentioned by Antony Wood. In the second, Father Parsons is uniformly spoken of by the nick-name of Father Cowbucke, and is stigmatized as a coward and an arrant traytour to his prince and countrie. Wood mentions a "Second Letter of A. C. to his disjesuited Kinsman," 1602.

Wood, on the authority of Prynne, mentions an edition printed in London of this date, in which several passages against Arminianism, which appeared in the editions of 1627 and 1628, were expunged by Bishop Laud's agents, to the great injury both of truth and the author. The present edition, not having the imprint of London, and retaining the offensive passages, would appear to have been unknown to Wood.

This is a discourse written on occasion of the memorable accident in the French ambassador's house in Blackfriars, in November, 1623, when a number of persons were killed by the falling in of the floor. Several passages prove that it was printed surreptitiously. One of the preacher's deductions is sufficiently amusing, "Thirdly, observe the play-house stands in that place unshaken, though too often laden with sinfull multitudes of all sorts, sexes, and sects; because it professeth itself to be no better than it is, a play-house: and perhaps some houses of corporall fornication stand there also, because for custome sake, that they may have the more comeings in, they desire to seem what they are, brothels: but this house, which professeth itself for Christ, when it is for Antichrist, &c; this must not stand, but the Lord makes it a spectacle of his judgment."

Rouen, Prentet in the Prnt Hous of Marin Michel, 1615, 12mo. title and latter end a little injured, vellum

This work is divided into sixty-six chapters. The first seven are devoted to an account of "the abominable lives and pestiferous doctrines" of Luther, Calvin, Zuinglius, Beza (in this there is given one of Beza's Poemata Juvenilia, with an English poetical Translation), Bucer, Carolostadius, and Œcolampadius; from chapter 8 to 49 contain an account of Knox and the first Scottish ministers; 50 to 53, the ministers' connection with the devil, &c. and the remaining chapters to an examination and refutation of the Protestant doctrines. The author seems to have been determined, to retort with interest upon the Reformers the accusations they had brought against the licentious lives of the Romish clergy; according to him, Luther, Calvin, &c. were all stained with the most horrible crimes, even those at which human nature revolts; almost all the Scottish ministers held communication with the devil, which worshipful personage also had been seen "by manie oculare witnesse" preaching in the shape of a minister, particularly in the church at Northberique.

This tract is not noticed by Antony Wood in his account of Cardinal Allen. It is a production of uncommon ability, uniting a keenness of argument which cuts his adversary to pieces, with a tone of moderation in those days most uncommon, and a spirit of eloquence not exceeded by any thing in the present day.

Tumulus: A multis omnium ordinum collachrymantibus variegato opere exornatus, with portrait of the Bishop, by R. G. Abred. E. Raban, 1635, 4to. vellum ^{32 10 6}

This volume contains, besides a number of Sermons, Orations, &c. between 40 and 50 poetical tributes in Latin and English, to the memory of this excellent Bishop, the last of which is the composition of the Printer, and terminates thus:

“ Good Sirs I am bihind the rest,
I doe confesse, for want of skill:
But not a whit behind the best,
To shew th’ affection of good will.
Edward Raban, Master Printer,
the first in Aberdene.”

The portrait is extremely rare, and not mentioned in Grainger.

This is an earlier edition of this work than had been seen either by Wood or Bliss, Ath. Oxon. i. 553. Although the title page mentions four books, only three are given. In a note at the end of the preface Pettie says, "I have not published the fourth booke, for that it containeth much trifling matter in it." In the subsequent edition quoted by Wood, the fourth book was supplied by Bartholomew Young.

Antony Gibson is only the editor of this little work. He has prefixed a double dedication, and four sonnets to the Countesse of Southampton, and to Mistresses Anne Russell, Margaret Ratcliffe, Mary Fitten, &c. maids of honor to Q. Elizabeth. He states it to be a "translated Apologie of Women's faire Virtues, written in French by a noble lord, and translated by a fellow and friend of his then absent," &c. (probably from the "Champion de Femmes," of the Chevalier de l'Escale.) A number of poetical translations are interspersed.

- Of Campanella's work Professor Dugald Stewart remarks—
 "In his idea of a perfect Commonwealth, to which he gives the name of Civitas Solis, the impurity of his imagination, and the unsoundness of his judgment, are equally conspicuous. He recommends, under certain regulations, a community of women, and in every thing connected with procreation, lays great stress on the opinions of astrologers."

7 176 1193 The Hog-faced Gentlewoman (A Certaine Relation of) called Mistriss Tannakin Skinker, who was borne at Wickham, a neuter Toune betweene the Emperour and the Hollander, scituate on the River Rhyne. Who was bewitched in her Mother's Wombe, in the yeare 1618, and hath lived ever since unknowne in this kind to any but her parents and a few of her neighbours. And can never recover her true shape till she be married, &c. Also relating the cause, as it is since conceived, how her Mother came so bewitched. With wood-cut of the lady and her suitor, Lond. 1640, 4to. sewed

Whether this be the original of this strange story which was revived so strongly in the beginning of last year, (and of which the account extracted from the Times Newspaper of the 16th of February, 1815, will not here be deemed out of place) I cannot pretend to say. At all events, it is above 120 years older than the writer of that article supposed it to be.

“ There is at present a report in London of a woman with a strangely deformed face, resembling that of a pig, who is possessed of a large fortune, and, we suppose, wants all the comforts and conveniences incident to her sex and situation. We ourselves, unwittingly, put in an advertisement from a young woman offering herself to be her companion; and yesterday morning a fellow (with a calf's-head we suppose) transmitted to us another advertisement, attended by a one pound note, offering himself to be her husband. (This advertisement actually did appear in the Morning Herald of February 19th.) We have put his offer in the fire, and shall send his money to some charity, thinking it a pity that such a fool should have any. Our rural friends hardly know what idiots London contains. The pig's face is as firmly believed in by many as Joanna Southcott's pregnancy, to which folly it has succeeded. Though no Parson Tozer has yet mounted the rostrum to preach in support of the face, there is hardly a company in which the swinish female is not talked of, and thousands believe in her existence. The story however is an old one.

About 50 years ago, it is well recollected by several elderly people, there was exactly the same rumour. It was revived, with but slight effect, about 30 years since, and now comes forth again in its pristine vigor. On the original invention of the pig-faced woman, about the year 1764, a man offered himself to make her an ivory trough to feed out of, which can only be considered as a feeble type of the silver cradle actually presented in our day," &c.

The pamphlet itself I have not seen before, nor can I find it in any preceding collection.

 This tract has been ascribed to Pierre Mathieu, the French historian, and to Philip Massinger, our English dramatist; it is certainly not the work of either. It has excited a good deal of remark in former times, having been made the subject of a paper in the Craftsman, considering it to be a satire against the Duke of Buckingham. I cannot find that the circumstance of there being two editions has been before noticed; the first is little more than the skeleton or outline of the second. The work is decidedly of home-bred manufacture.

Speaking of the title of Defender of the Faith, the author says: "It is more than an hundred yeares since it was given to his majestie's great-grandfather, James the Fourth king of Scots, as the chronicles of M. Chambres do testifie, so that they deceive themselves who thinke it is no longer than since the time of King Henry the Eighth of England."

For the libels against the government and the established religion, which these works contained, Penry was tried, and capitally convicted, May 25, 1593, and executed four days after.—(See Wood's Athenæ, by Bliss, vol. 1, page 597. Other persons were concerned in the composition of them.—See Sutcliffe's answer to Throckmorton, No. 2045, in this Catalogue.)

To his unfortunate catastrophe Gabriel Harvey probably alludes in the following passage in "Pierce's Supererogation," published a few months after. (1593) "And being further pressed touching the forward zeale of dowie Martin Seniour, lively Martin Junieur, pert Penry, lusty Barrow, and some other bragge Reformistes: (for that rowling stone of Innovation was never so turl'd and tumbled, as since those busie limmes began to rowse, and besturre them, more then all the Pragmatiques in Europe:) when young Phaeton, quoth he, in a presumptuous resolution would needes rule the Chariot of the Sunne, as it might be the Temple of Apollo, or the Church of S. Paule, or some greater Province (for the greater Province, Commonwealth, or Monarchy, the fitter for Phaeton's reformation): his sudden ruine ministred matter of most lamentable teares, to his dear mother, and loving Sisters; in so much, that they were pittifully chaunged, as some write, into Elder trees, as some, into Poplars."

This is the first edition of the famous treatise, concerning which the Parliament of 35 Elizabeth enacted, that "whosoever should be found to have it in his house should be guilty of high treason," and for the printing of which, Wood says, he had heard (but could not affirm) that the printer was hanged, drawn, and quartered. It was condemned by the University of Oxford, on account of its dangerous positions, (particularly that which saith, "Birth-right and proximity of blood do give no title to rule or government,") and burnt in the school quadrangle there July 1683.

- 2161 Swetnam the Woman-hater, arraigned by Women. A new Comedie acted at the Red Bull, by the late Queene's Servants, wood-cuts, Lond. 1620, 4to. sewed

The name of Swetnam, author of "The Araignment," is evidently fictitious; I have endeavoured, but in vain, to trace the real author. Perhaps the following passage in the comedy may contain some clue:—

"He was in England, a poore scholar first,
And came to Medley to eat cakes and creame
At my old mother's house: she trusted him
At least some sixteen shillings o' the score;
And he persuaded her, he would make me
A scholer of the Niniversitie, which she, kind fool, beleev'd:

And in one year he runne away from thence,
And then he tooke the habit of a Fencer:
And set up schoole at Bristow: there he liv'd
A yeere or two, till he had writ this booke;
And then the women beat him out the towne,
And then we came to London: there forsooth
He put his booke i' the presse, and publisht it, &c.

2177 Scot (Thomas) Vox Dei, without date or place, but printed about 1623, with a most beautiful frontispiece, containing 13 portraits,—King James, Prince Charles, the King and Queen of Bohemia and their children, the Duke of Buckingham; and Earl of Holderness, 4to. sewed 3 15 -

The frontispieces to the two preceding articles are mentioned both by Granger and Bromley, without their appearing to know any thing of the works to which they belonged.

2179 Scot (Thomas) The Second Part of Vox Populi, or Gondomar appearing in the Likeness of Matchiavell in a Spanish Parliament. Wherein are discovered his treacherous and subtle Practices, to the Ruin as well of England as the Netherlands. Faithfully translated out of the Spanish Coppie by a well-willer to England and Holland. Printed at Goricom by Ashuerus Janss, 1624, stilo novo, with engraved title, including a fine whole-length portrait of Count Gondomar, Gentis Hispanæ Decus, and two curious vignettes, "The Spanish Parliament," and "The English Jesuits and Priests," 4to. sewed 1 10 -

2180 Scot (Thomas) Vox Cœli, or Newes from Heaven, of a Consultation there held by the high and mighty Princes King Henry 8, King Edward 6, Prince Henry, Queen Mary, Queen Elizabeth, and Queen Anne. Wherein Spaine's Ambition and Treacheries to most Kingdomes and Estates of Europe are unmasked and truly represented; but more particularly towards England; and now more especially under the pretended Match of Prince Charles with the Infanta Donna Maria. Whereunto is annexed two Letters, written by Queen Mary from Heaven; the one to Count Gondomar, the Ambassador of Spain, the other to all the Roman Catholics of England. Printed in Elisium, 1624, 4to. sewed 107 reasons, and true and solid motives to persuade His Majestie to draw his royall sword for the restoring of the Pallatynat and Electorat to his sonne in law Prince Fredericke, to his only daughter the Ladie Elizabeth, and theyr princelie issue, against the treacherous usurpation and formidable ambition and power of the Emperour, the King of Spaine, and the Duke of Bavaria, who unjustly possesse and detain the same; together with some aphorismes returned (with a large interest) to the Pope, in answer of his, Utrecht, 1624, 4to. sewed

114. 2182 Scot (Thomas) Aphorismes of State, or Certaine Secret Articles, for the re-edefying of the Romish Church agreed upon and approved in Councell by the Colledge of Cardinalls in Rome, shewed and delivered unto Pope Gregory the 15th, a little before his death. Whereunto is annexed a censure upon the chieffe points of that which the Cardinalls had concluded. Very needfull and profitable for all those who are desirous to understand the event of the Restitution of the Palatinate, and of the State of the Prince Electors of Saxon and Brandenburgh, in the behalf of the clergie in Rome. Fit for the British nation especially to take notice of, that they may evidently see the issue of all our treaties, ambassages, and promises, with other hopes depending; wherein we have been long held in suspense, and are still like to be to our irrecoverable loss, Utrecht, 1624, 4to. sewed

- 1-116 2184 Scot (Thomas) A Briefe and True Relation of the Murther of, committed by John Lambert, Souldier of the Garrison of Utricke, the 18th of June 1626; with his examination, confession, and execution, Lond. 1628, 4to. sewed

These political Tracts of Thomas Scot are valuable (independent of their rarity, which is considerable) and curious beyond most other tracts of this period, on account of the light they throw upon the policy of the latter years of King James's reign. The effect of them upon the public mind at the time must have been very great, if we may judge from the persecution of the author, and the pains taken by the government to suppress them. In the Vox Regis, giving an account of the motives which induced him to write Vox Populi, the author states the consequences of that publication to himself: "Against this (even as I feared) not only Goliah and the Philistines, ennemies of the state, but the Israelites themselves; yea, my brethren, of one faith, my friends, familiars, acquaintance, opposed themselves with a violent censure, and passionate pursuit of the unknowne author."—"But whilst these things were maturely debating, and poore I labouring to hide myself from the enemie, behold the Philistines found my Heyfer, and so unfolded my riddle. As-soone as I was seene, it was no need to bid me runne (as they say) for life, especially when by a dreame I was warned of the danger, and willed to make haste, and led as it were by the hand, like Lot out of Sodom."—"Whilst I rose up, and was musing of this strange and importunate dreame, a more certain warning seconded the first, and with David, I heard them knocke at the doore, who willed to make haste."

This is an exceedingly curious volume; it was formerly the property of Jane Countess of Bothwell, afterwards Countess of Sutherland (the divorced wife of the famous Earl of Huntly, who married Queen Mary) and mother of Sir Robert Gordon; it has her autograph, and those of several of the Earls of Sutherland, Alexander, John, William, and several others. The edition of the History of the Three Kings of Cologne has not been before described, and differs by one year from that in the Duc de la Valiere's catalogue referred to by Brunet.

This work, as well as another in this Catalogue, No. 238, have entirely escaped the diligent researches of both Antony Wood and Mr. Bliss, although they are mentioned in passages of the Golden Fleece, which Mr. Haslewood has pointed out in the British Bibliographer, vol. ii. p. 266 (note). This last piece is the most curious of all, being interspersed with a number of anecdotes connected with the author's personal history; among which is an interesting account of the loss of his wife, from being struck dead by lightning in January 1608, &c.
